

Albright Meets with Northern Ohio's Eastern & Central European Community Leaders on Behalf of Barack Obama

On Tuesday, Sept. 30, former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright met with leaders from northern Ohio's Eastern and Central European communities to discuss Barack Obama's plan to restore America's global standing and bolster our national security. The meeting took place in advance of Albright's speech at the City Club of Cleveland on foreign policy.

In her private meeting with leaders from Croatian, Slovenian, Serbian, Slovak, Czech, Polish, Romanian, Armenian, Ukrainian and Hungarians communities across Northeast Ohio, Albright expressed her support for the Obama-Biden ticket. She also listened to concerns of the various community leaders and offered her insight on the challenges that face the country and the world. Albright also recognized the value of Cleveland's and Toledo's multicultural heritage.

"We are pleased with the response from Sec. Albright and Sen. Obama to the concerns of our communities on both domestic and international concerns," said State Representative Kenny Yuko, who attended the event on behalf of the Slovenian community. "It is clear that the Obama-Biden ticket will lead our country forward and provide the change we need to rebuild our economy and strengthen our standing in the World."
