

Students - over one hundred and thirty strong – lined up outside the door of the Richmond Heights Board of Education this Saturday morning.

Why? To protest dress codes? Or, to buy tickets to homecoming?

NO! They came in throngs to support their school -- to help spread the word that RHS is still alive, kicking, and needing the community to get on board.

More than 130 students participated in the door-to-door campaign to raise awareness of the much-neglected school district's needs. If you passed them in your car on Saturday morning, the kids probably greeted you with a joyful shout and wave. The sight and sound of young adults pumped up to save their school inspired gladness in my heart - and, hopefully, in the spirit of the community.

CHEERS to the Richmond Heights Student Body.... and success!
